

LMT Bird Town: Help Migrating Birds Travel Safely!

Fall migration is underway! Millions of birds are making their incredible journeys south, and many travel at night, using the moon, stars, and other natural cues to navigate.

Unfortunately, artificial lights can confuse and disorient migrating birds, causing them to lose their way, become exhausted, or collide with buildings. A few simple actions can help save their lives!

-  Turn off unnecessary outdoor lights, especially from dusk to dawn.
-  Dim indoor lights and close curtains or blinds at night to reduce light shining through windows.
-  Use motion sensors for outdoor lighting when needed for safety.

 Every light turned off makes a difference! By keeping our night skies dark, we can help migrating birds find their way safely to their winter homes.

Let's make Lower Makefield a bird-friendly community, one light at a time!
